Mission Statement

ACT's mission is directly in line with Appalachian State University's academic mission and strategic directions. Listed below are five main points which outline what we strive to accomplish through our work with ASU students, faculty members, and our community partners.

- ◆ To challenge students to embark on an inner journey of personal, intellectual, moral, and cultural development as they engage in service projects that meet the human needs and environmental concerns of Watauga County and northwest North Carolina.
- ◆ To raise students' awareness about crucial social concerns, encourage them to view themselves as part of the global community, and challenge them to seek solutions to the complex root causes of these systemic problems.
- ◆ To illustrate the powerful connection between theory and practice by integrating community service with academic coursework, thus augmenting the university's intellectual climate.
- ◆ To support and recognize the efforts of individuals, organizations, and classes whose actions and commitment enhance local community agencies' abilities to deliver services, thereby strengthening the relationship between Appalachian and the local community.
- ◆ To instill in students an ethic of caring, teach students about the importance of civic responsibility, and empower them to engage in active citizenship beyond graduation from ASU.

Community Service Coordinator, Kate Johnson coordinates the Community Service Work-Study Program, ASU's Alternative Spring Break program, annual ACT co-sponsored events, and works with student groups to find volunteer placements.

Service-Learning Coordinator, Shari Galiardi, works with ASU faculty members to integrate service into their curriculum in order to serve the needs of our community while making classroom theory come alive in a community service environment.

Community Partner Coordinator, Todd Mortensen, supports our community partner agencies and student volunteers. He provides training, keeps ACT up-to-date on the latest community needs, and helps students to get the most from their experience.

ACT's Graduate Assistants oversee the ACT Community Outreach Center, advise the impACT Team, and work closely with ACT staff to assist special programs and projects.

ACT's Peer Counselors assist individuals and groups with finding community service opportunities. They keep service opportunities up-to-date, provide one-on-one orientation to new ACT volunteers, and keep the Outreach Center running smoothly.
